Is Club Level worth it? The 5-minute calculator

Step 1: tick every statement that is true for your trip. Then count your ticks.

- [ ] We'll be back at the resort at least once in the middle of the day.
- [ ] Our crew likes a quick breakfast before the parks.
- [ ] We'd love snacks and drinks without opening a wallet every time.
- [ ] Someone in our group enjoys an evening glass of wine or beer.
- [ ] We're celebrating: an anniversary, a milestone birthday, a first trip.
- [ ] We're traveling with grandparents or a multigenerational group.
- [ ] We'd use a concierge for dining and park questions.
- [ ] Fewer than half our dinners are sit-down reservations.
- [ ] We value a quiet space away from the crowds.
- [ ] We're staying at a resort we'll actually spend time in.

STEP 2

Do the math for your family

Estimate what you'd spend each day on the things the lounge covers. Use your own numbers. The example column is only an illustration, not Disney prices.

What the lounge covers	Example, family of 4	Your estimate per day
Quick breakfast for everyone	$60	_____
Midday and afternoon snacks, soft drinks, coffee	$40	_____
Evening hors d'oeuvres, wine and beer	$50	_____
Late-night desserts and cordials	$25	_____
Daily total	$175	_____

Compare it

Club Level usually costs $120–$375 more per night than a standard room at the same resort, as of November 2026.

Your daily total _____
Club Level premium for your dates _____

Reading the result

- Your total is close to the premium: book it. The time and calm are the bonus.
- Your total is far below it: it is a splurge. That's fine for a celebration, but know it going in.

Three things the math leaves out

- Time. Breakfast in ten minutes means you're at Early Theme Park Entry instead of in a food line.
- No line-skipping. Club Level has no ride perk and can't open a sold-out restaurant.
- The resort matters. Lounges, food times and views differ. Gran Destino Tower's Chronos Club is the lowest-cost way in.
